

Never Again? Thinking about the Holocaust

Artist/Organisation: The Wiener Library

Never Again? Thinking about the Holocaust has been designed by the Wiener Library as a way for other organisations and institutions to educate and inform their audiences regardless of space and budgets available. The exhibition uses the holdings of the Wiener Library to encourage people to think critically about the issues raised by the Holocaust and genocide. Questions such as:

- have attitudes towards refugees and asylum seekers changed since the 1930s?
- does propaganda no longer exist? Or is its potential actually greater than before?
- can monuments and ceremonies to remember the victims of the Holocaust and genocide help to prevent future mass killings?

Dimensions: The exhibition consists of five double-sided exhibition stands, designed to work independently, allowing the exhibition to travel to different sized venues. Each stand has two panels – the front and the back – but again these are self-contained, and can be displayed on their own if, for example, the exhibition needs to be placed against a wall.

Panel Specifications

Upright Panel Measurements 2.23m x 0.8m

Base Dimensions 0.85m x 0.25m

Weight Approx 6kg

Each stand packs into a convenient padded carry bag, measuring approx 90cm x 30cm x 10cm and will fit easily into the boot of a small car.

Cost of hire: Free - £100 refundable deposit. Delivery and collection must also be paid by the hirer.
